DAY LILIES

HEMEROCALLIS

(Beauty of the day)

FALL 1939

SPRING 1940

LEONARD HOWARD

32 Smythe Avenue, Dunean
GREENVILLE, SOUTH CAROLINA

My Plants

You will read elsewhere in this catalogue what some of my customers have written me about my plants. These letters have all been unsolicited. My plants are well grown and reasonably priced. They are dug fresh for each order and they would satisfy me if I were the buyer instead of the seller.

My Terms

My terms are cash with order. Where an order amounts to three dollars, or over, except in the case of plants sold for naturalizing, carrying charges will be prepaid. Unless you wish shipment to be made at a later date your order will be dug and shipped within twenty-four hours from the time order is received.

My Guarantee

My plants are guaranteed to arrive in good condition and to be true to name. If you have any losses within a period of six months from the time an order is received, and you feel that the fault is mine, I will replace the plants, provided you pay the carrying charges on the replacement. Simply notify me within six months from the time you receive shipment and if you think I am at fault no questions will be asked. My motto is "The customer must be pleased."

Hemerocallis

The common daylily or hemerocallis, to use its botanical name, is widely known. It was brought to this country by early settlers and it has increased abundantly. However the only daylilies known to many American gardeners are Flava the old fashioned lemon lily and Fulva Europa the reddish orange wayside lily.

In recent years great strides have been made in hybridizing, with the most amazing results, so that today it is possible to obtain a collection of hemerocallis which will give a succession of blooms from Spring to Autumn with colors ranging from pale yellow through orange to red, and heights from one to five feet. Many of the blooms have a pleasing fragrance.

One of the outstanding characteristics of daylilies is their sturdy habit of growth. No insect or disease has been known to injure them. They grow well in full sun or partial shade in any part of the country. Truly, hemerocallis is becoming one of America's favorite perennials.

Naturalizing the Daylily

Gardeners are becoming increasingly interested in naturalistic planting of daylilies. They lend themselves well to this type of planting. Their hardiness, attractive foliage and the fact that after they have become established they require so little care, make it possible to use them effectively in locations unsuited to other types of perennials.

Hybrid daylilies for this purpose can be supplied at $20.00 a hundred, fifty at the hundred rate, express collect. One or more varieties, of my selection, will be sent labelled. Flava and Fulva Europa will not be included. Light or dark shades will be sent upon request.

Unsolicited Approval

FLORIDA.

"You are most generous in the size of your plants. They came in excellent condition."

- WAU-BUN. (Stout) 3 feet. July-August. The blooms are large, light cadmium yellow, over which there is a delicate sprinkling of very faint fulvous red. The twisted character of the petals makes this a lovely and interesting variety. One of the ten best. $1.50.
- WINSOME. (Yeld) (A. M. R. H. S.) 3 feet. June-July. Pale, creamy yellow, wide-open flowers. A dainty and fragrant variety. Considered by Mr. Yeld one of his best introductions. $1.00.

UN-NAMED VARIETY (Double Hemerocallis). 3 feet. July-August. It is not possible to give the name of this variety. It was found growing in a garden in South Carolina, having belonged to the family for many years. The plant should really be classed as triple, rather than double. It has three distinct sets of petals and sepals, all of which lie back evenly. The color is orange, overlaid rose, with a splash of deeper rose on each petal and sepal. A golden yellow throat lights up the flower, which has a tiny cup-like center. Quite distinct and worthwhile. $1.50.

A. M. R. H. S. indicates variety has been given an award of merit by the Royal Horticultural Society of England.

Planting Instructions

The soil should be thoroughly pulverized and a hole dug large enough to comfortably accommodate the roots of the plant which should be spread out, not bunched together. The plant should be thoroughly watered at frequent intervals until it has become well established. Any high grade fertilizer suitable for perennials will be satisfactory. The main difference between the daylily and the average perennial is that it is far hardier and requires less attention. It, of course, is not indestructible and while it will grow in poor soil, it expresses its gratitude when given reasonable care and good food, by repaying the gardener with a greater abundance of beautiful blooms and more rapid growth.

Special Top Ten and Next Eight Selection

For the past three years a poll has been conducted among growers of hemerocallis to determine which of the daylilies were considered of highest rating among specialists.

Below will be found two collections: The leading ten varieties and the next eight. Those marked with an asterisk have placed among the first ten in each of the three polls.
